When the [illegible] session of the San Francisco stock board [illegible] from futures [illegible] would be held to-day. After the session [illegible] jumped upward amid wild excitement. Con. Cal. rose to $37, Ophir to $. [illegible] and others in proportion. Sales of the two sessions of the San Francisco stock exchange board yesterday aggregated [illegible] shares. This is stated to be probably the largest for any two sessions in the past ten years. A rough estimate gives the value of the sales at [illegible] 000.

SAN FRANCISCO MINING STOCKS BEFORE.

ANOTHER FAILURE.

At noon the firm of Kullman & Co., brokers of the Pacific stock exchange, surrendered to the board and announced that they were unable to meet their obligations. [illegible]

SCENES ON THE STREET.

The People Hourly Becoming Wilder—Brokers Working Night and Day.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. — Long before the time for the opening of the stock boards this morning, [illegible] whom was in a state of [illegible] anxiety. A throng of women filled the lobby of the Pacific stock exchange and in wild eyed excitement harangued all who would listen to their tale of woe. The heavy investors who losses footed up into the hundreds were of course all men and they were generally gloomy and silent, but the women whose investments ranged from $50 down were profuse in their [illegible] of dire revenge on the brokers who had been unkind enough to close their doors and in [illegible] that they could not meet their liabilities.

The market was kept up fairly at the San Francisco board at its only session of to-day. The omission of the afternoon session of this board was accounted for by brokers on the ground that they had not time to catch up with office business if they had two sessions, which statement, if accepted, would seem to indicate something concerning the [illegible] of the craze.

It was easily apparent that the public were the stock dealers. They came from all the alleys and streets from brokers' offices below ground and above ground and swarmed the approaches to both boards. Every broker in the city is perfectly overwhelmed with business. Few of them have any of their old staff left. A majority of the present clerks are green hands and cannot keep pace with the sudden rush although they may be seen at their desks at midnight and are bending over them again before sunrise. [illegible] Nobody can tell exactly where he is or how anybody else stands, and were this state of things allowed to continue longer it might result in something more serious than the [illegible] Extra clerks [illegible] engaged in all directions and those with experience can quote their services at high rates.

THURSDAY'S SCENES REPEATED.

When the San Francisco board opened there was about the same number in attendance as at the session yesterday afternoon. A few ladies seemingly strangers and others were in the gallery looking down through the great spider web of [illegible] upon the brokers [illegible]. Brokers pushed and rushed about in a state of great excitement, with note books and pencils and the babel of their voices was added to by the shouts of the speculators who gesticulated and [illegible] in their books.

The announcement of Morrow's failure [illegible] very little surprise, for it was generally expected yesterday. At the same time the announcement was received that J. Mackenzie [illegible] stock broker had closed his doors. [illegible] in increasing the excitement and with [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] brokers were being [illegible] of business with them. It was the general belief of the street that the downfall of a solid capitalist [illegible] Mr. Morrow would [illegible] panic that would sink many other brokers and bring them down like a row of bricks.

The Pacific stock board [illegible] as at this board seemingly [illegible] the majority of [illegible]. Anxious faced groups stood along the [illegible] from the street to the entrance to the board. The brokers' offices which were entered [illegible]. This passage was well tenanted by equally anxious looking people. Still coin clinked [illegible] banks deposits went into the deal. The fact is [illegible] appeared that a majority of the attendants at the board were people of scanty means. The local [illegible] stocks had gone beyond their ability to buy [illegible] with an estimate determination to gamble. [illegible]

[illegible]

Although the brokers of the San Francisco exchange gave themselves a breathing spell at 11 o'clock, so far as their business was concerned the public were as anxious as ever [illegible] throughout the afternoon while brokers [illegible] were ordered. Orders were being refused in all directions and large sums of money offered [illegible] on the counter by customers who desired to buy were pushed away by men behind the counter who said they positively could not take any more business till they had cleared away what they had on hand.

The suspensions [illegible] the excitement [illegible] of the market produced a feeling of [illegible] [illegible] At noon it was reported on the streets that the brokers [illegible] would no [illegible]

THE PROPOSED CENTENNIAL

Programme for the Celebration of the 100th Anniversary of the Promulgation of the Constitution.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. — At to-day's session of the committee of state delegates to arrange for the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the promulgation of the federal constitution, permanent organization was formed with Hon. John A. Kasson of Iowa as president, and Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and Col. James A. Hoyt of South Carolina as vice presidents. The following executive sub-committee was appointed by the chairman: Pennsylvania, Amos R. Little; Virginia, William Wirt Henry; Massachusetts, Henry Cabot Lodge; South Carolina, Col. James H. Hoyt; Maryland, Gen. Clinton P. Payne; Indiana, Charles W. Reeve; New York, Edward J. Jones; Ohio, J. Corham; Missouri, Thomas T. Gantt; Mississippi, Marcellus Green; Michigan, Judge James V. Campbell; Connecticut, Henry C. Robinson; Dakota, N. C. Ordway.

The programme for the celebration, reported yesterday by the joint conference committee, was discussed at some length. Several amendments were agreed to and the programme was finally adopted as follows:

First. That there be an oration and poem in commemoration of the signing of the constitution.

Second. That there be a military display in which the United States shall be invited to be represented by each branch of its military and naval service and the several states and territories and the District of Columbia by their militia and volunteer service, and that the president be requested [illegible]

Third. That there be an industrial procession and display.

Fourth. That invitations to participate in the celebration be extended to the president of the United States and his cabinet, the federal judiciary, congress and representatives of all departments of the national government, to the governors of each state and territory [illegible]

Fifth.—Erection of a suitable memorial in the city of Philadelphia commemorative of the signing of the constitution [illegible]

WHITNEY'S REPORT.

He Pronounces the New Cruisers Almost Worthless.

THEY CAN NEITHER FIGHT NOR RUN

Suggestions in Relation to Armor and Guns—He Advises that Apprentices be Received at the Naval Academy.

WASHINGTON, Dec. —The report of Secretary of the Navy Whitney, given out to-night, opens with a renewal of his former recommendation of consolidation of bureaus so as to insure responsibility in the purchase and care of supplies, and so far as his power extended he has consolidated in one bureau the general purchases of the department. The report says: "There is at present no real responsibility for the care and disposition of property. In one bureau a property account is kept, in others none. Property lost, misused or stolen cannot be traced or accounted for, and no person can be held responsible. The fourth [illegible] in his report [illegible] attention to this remarkable circumstance which was also referred to in his first report. An inventory [illegible] very large and unnecessary accumulation [illegible] twenty millions of dollars in appraised value [illegible] reports between three and four [illegible] absolutely useless at the [illegible] an expense for keepers and [illegible] in good condition. [illegible] very absurd [illegible] At eight navy yards there have been [illegible] of which [illegible] have been lying for several years at [illegible] has been [illegible] likely [illegible]" [illegible] the new cruisers the report says: "The experience of the department in its first attempt [illegible] model vessels of war has been [illegible] the greatest concern and [illegible] An examination of the facts [illegible] has demonstrated that an [illegible] new departure was necessary in undertaking their similar construction. One characteristic which an armored cruiser must possess is great speed. This is determined by the functions which she is expected to perform in modern warfare. She is a 'commerce destroyer.' She must be able to escape from ironclads and outrun [illegible] to overhaul merchantmen. If slower [illegible] she could not keep afloat, and if [illegible] than merchantmen she might as well stay in port.

THE NEW CRUISERS.

This division of ships by the functions which they are expected to perform is one of the things which has come about of recent years. When it became impossible to concentrate in one ship both the greatest speed, strongest armament and highest defensive power without reaching a tonnage displacement wholly out of the question, division [illegible] according to the class of work which [illegible] expected to perform came about. Unarmored cruisers have become a distinct class and a characteristic absolutely indispensable to this class is very great speed. When the Dolphin, Boston, Atlanta and Chicago were projected and [illegible] for their construction entered into it [illegible] known that speed ought to be attained [illegible] weight and character of machinery per [illegible] displacement was necessary to obtain it. [illegible] vessels had at the time attained speeds [illegible] between 16 and 19 knots and cruisers [illegible] in other countries attaining the same [illegible]

INFERIOR TO BRITISH VESSELS.

The secretary compares the trial trip of the Dolphin and Atlanta with those of English and French [illegible] recently completed to the disadvantage of the former. The Dolphin was designed for [illegible] indicated horse power and developed less than [illegible] while the Amethyst and Surprise, English boats of [illegible] developed [illegible] and [illegible] respectively. The Atlanta was designed to attain [illegible] horse power but her engines developed less than [illegible]

The report says: "These facts are stated without [illegible] of locating responsibility or blame upon any person. It is impossible to ascertain where they should be placed. But they indicate a simple abandonment on the part of the department of any attempt to reach conditions which should have been attained and failure on the part of the contractors to reach the limited results expected by the department."

In considering the matter of constructing the additional vessels authorized by congress in March, [illegible] it was decided by the department to exhaust every effort to avail itself of the most advanced [illegible] knowledge attained by our own and other countries on the subject. The report says the department has accumulated a large amount of [illegible] which will be utilized in the construction of vessels in the future. The report [illegible] resume of the bids and awards for the new [illegible] and says regarding cruiser No. [illegible] for which no bids were received within the limit fixed [illegible] congress: "Orders have been given to reduce [illegible] for the purpose of carrying out the intention of congress if possible and of bringing the expense of her construction within the limit of $[illegible]. It requires a readjustment of all weights and in fact the designing of a new vessel, which necessarily will take some months. Meanwhile it is hoped the limits fixed by congress may be removed so as to render available the present plans which have been the result of many months' labor on the part of all officers of the department."

ARMOR AND GUNS.

The report treats of armor and guns for monitors and armorclads at great length and deprecates that this country should be content to be dependent upon the manufacturers of any other nation for the fabrication of armor and high power guns.

The report says: "It has been the policy of congress to require from the department specific data covering the characteristics of the ships for the construction of which authority was asked in congress, and a year is not too long for this work. It would be of great benefit at the present time if the appointment of a commission be authorized to lay before the next congress a comprehensive scheme of construction, such commission to be composed of both civilian and naval experts to deal with the subject. If congress should at its next session make provision for the manufacture in this country of armor and of high powered guns and should take steps for securing broader and more intelligent consideration and treatment [illegible] the general subject of construction proper to [illegible] taken from time to time in the end would be [illegible] mistakes would be avoided. Meanwhile [illegible] duty to call attention to the urgent necessity of immediate action. The report of the chief [illegible] of the navy sets forth the present condition of vessels now in commission and their probable duration. If his estimate is correct in six years the country will be possessed of but three serviceable cruising ships of those now upon the [illegible] and unless a new navy shall be created there will be none in existence after that lapse of time. The small amount of modern armor which has [illegible] used by the department of late years has been purchased abroad, a policy certainly not in keeping with proper dignity and pride nor at all consistent with wisdom. At the present time and for many years to come in the event of a conflict with either a first or a second class naval power it [illegible] impossible for the United States as at present situated to produce within its territory [illegible] armor required for armored ships or the [illegible] necessary for their armament. Nor would it be possible for the navy of the United States to [illegible] articles in transit across the ocean even if [illegible] to obtain them elsewhere [illegible] war. As at present situated the country would be entirely defenseless in the absence of [illegible] to procure armor or larger high power guns."

[illegible] report says: "In [illegible] for the fiscal year ending [illegible] after paying all liabilities for the [illegible] it is believed there will be an unexpended [illegible] half [illegible] of the navy and of the marine [illegible] expenditures [illegible] 000,000 or [illegible] less than appropriations. [illegible] for [illegible] completion of double turreted monitors.

THE NAVAL ACADEMY.

The secretary recommends that the naval [illegible] course be shortened to four years as recommended by the commandant of the academy [illegible] that apprentices be admitted to the academy [illegible] it is desired by the department that the naval service should not be open to any charge of exclusiveness as a sole exception to the sound and wholesome principle of our national [illegible] To this end it would recommend that measures be taken by which under safe [illegible] admission to the naval academy might be given to a limited number of apprentices who should then be subjected to the same course of training and examination as other cadets and who under application of a uniform test should [illegible] according to the strength or weakness of their own merits. [illegible] it is believed that the opening of the quarter deck to apprentices will [illegible] by strengthening the bond between officer and enlisted man will react favorably upon the character of our naval service."

PORTLAND, SATURDAY, DEC. 4, 1886.

RAPID ADVANCE.

Various phases of the labor question, including strikes, the boycott, arbitration, etc., have occupied a good deal of the public attention in the United States during the past year; and recently what is called the land question has been added to the discussion. The principal result has been the clearing away of a lot of rubbish, so that glimpses may be had of what is really reasonable and practicable, and what is not. There has been rapid education of our people upon the vast differences between American freedom and foreign communism and nihilism, and an experience has been gained which in its results shows that no people ever before had such a faculty for applying the fundamental principles of their government to new emergencies. We find that in all this movement there is little that is really new; that every path and bypath of the field has been beaten by innumerable feet during the centuries that have preceded us, and the signs are that our people as a whole are going to be wise enough to avoid long wanderings in the same old tracks of error. Already, though the "agitation" with us is comparatively new, we are able to see the demonstrations of certain very important facts. Some of them may be enumerated.

First—While labor has the unquestioned right to combine and co-operate, the freedom of the individual laborer to sell his labor to whom he pleases is one of the inherent rights of every man. Our history has been written in vain if this is not true. The freedom of labor contracts is as sacred a right as the freedom of speech, and far more essential to the great mass of men. No feature of the strikes of the past year has more deeply impressed the reflecting observer than the displays of violence toward men who have tried to assert their natural right to earn a living. These displays have largely failed of their purpose; and it is not too much to predict that whenever this issue is pressed to its legitimate consequences, the average American sentiment will compel recognition of the right of every man to choose his own employment and employer.

Second—It has become entirely evident that the wholly un-American, un-naturalizable and barbarous thing called the "boycott" cannot prevail in this country, nor even remain in it. Less than a year ago the boycott was invoked on every hand and wielded with aggressive force. If a man wasn't liked, "Boycott him!" If a business wasn't liked, "Boycott it!" The boycott was supposed to be Jove's thunder, and not every pigmy was wielding it. At first indignation was kindled by the presumption, and then contempt was provoked by the failure. Nobody hears of the boycott now.

Third—There is no right of labor that can be secured or aided by law which is not readily granted, and there is no wrong of labor that cannot be relieved and redressed by quiet and orderly methods, with the hearty concurrence of the great mass of the American people, capitalists and all. There is no legislature, not excluding congress, which does not stand ready to protect the interests of labor by every legitimate and constitutional means, and there is also a clearer view—and it is growing clearer still every day—of the true scope and practical limits of legislative action in this behalf. In short, it is being learned that, after all, laws can do little for a man. He must do most things for himself.

It does not follow from these facts that labor organizations are to be discredited and broken up. On the contrary, they seem to be steadily gaining in numbers and strength. This may be set down as a result of increasing moderation and reason. To this conclusion the apparent adoption of certain absurd theories about land proposed by Henry George, may be cited as an exception; but this vagary will also soon correct itself. It is no new thing; it has appeared in one form or another ever since mankind began to have a written history, and I no doubt it was known even earlier, and it was distinctively proposed and urged, almost in the very terms used by Henry George, among the speculative theories of the earlier part of the great revolution in France. But it was soon dropped as too chimerical even for the revolutionary madness of that time. With us it will be but the vagary of a day.

A SENTIMENTAL GRIEVANCE.

The crusade against convict labor is a purely sentimental grievance. The labor organizations, in their ignorance or their prejudice, forget that the amount produced by convict labor is too insignificant, compared with the general production of the state, to have any appreciable effect on the rate of wages or the general prosperity of honest labor. The real argument for convict labor is the duty of society to provide the convict with a means of earning an honest living when discharged from prison. It is of small consequence to the state comparatively whether, in this effort to teach the convict a good trade, it makes the penal institution self-supporting or not, if it only makes the convict sufficiently self-supporting that his chances of returning to a life of crime are reduced. Honest labor that complains of convict labor forgets that honest labor has to be taxed to support prisons and almshouses that dishonest or incapable men fill. Honest labor is foolish, therefore, sentimentally to grumble over convict labor which, whether it directly pays the state or not in profit, will surely indirectly pay the state by increasing the number of the self-supporting outlaws of society. A man capable of self-support may commit a crime, but a man with a decent trade is not near as likely to get into prison or the almshouse and become a public charge as a man who has no trade and resorts to his wits to worry his way through the world. The state is bound in policy, if not in humanity, to try to make its convicts better, or at least less dangerous an I expensive members of society, when released, than they were when first imprisoned. Failing is no good for the convict as the habit of steady work at a skilled employment. Nothing is so bad for him as enforced idleness. Again, as honest labor has to pay for the support of that dishonest labor we call criminals, is not honest labor interested in the state's efforts to reduce the number of convicts, the number of prisoners, the expenses of it? Honest labor howling at convict labor is a "silly Billy," that saves at the spigot and spills at the bunghole, when it denounces convict labor and stupidly prefers to pay for the consequences of convict idleness and ignorance.

A LOBBY DOCTOR.

President Cleveland has done some very stupid things recently, but he did a good thing when he appointed Dr. John Moore surgeon-general of the army over Medical Purveyor Baxter. Medical Purveyor Baxter came into office originally under Andrew Johnson, in discharge of some political obligations he owed a republican congressman who had opposed Johnson's impeachment. Baxter was graduated in medicine in 1861; he secured the place of assistant surgeon in a Massachusetts regiment, but one campaign, that of second Bull Run, so thoroughly sickened him of field service that he retreated to Washington, where his father, who was a congressman, got him appointed to take charge of Campbell hospital. Here he remained during the rest of the war and after the war he became what is called a "hobby" doctor; that is, a doctor that treats influential congressmen and other influential lobbyists without charge for sake of securing influence to further his personal interests. Baxter invented the office of medical purveyor, or apothecary-general to the United States army, and Andrew Johnson nominated him to fill it about 1867 and he was confirmed. Since that time Baxter has divided with Lester Bliss, who advertised himself through his capture of Garfield and the subsequent death of his illustrious prisoner, the doubtful medical honors of "physician to the lobby," and he had a disgraceful quarrel with Bliss for the possession of Garfield's wounded body, but Bliss had the most "sand," so Baxter was dragged from the field and consoled himself with telling his friends that "if Garfield hadn't been shot he would have made him surgeon-general. Then Arthur came in, and like a just, sensible man, he appointed to the office of surgeon-general a man who had borne manfully in the field the real heat and burden of the day of war. Baxter has never ceased to intrigue for the office, and when the recent vacancy took place he thought Cleveland would surely appoint him, as he was strongly backed for the position by influential political friends of the president in New England, but Cleveland appointed Surgeon John Moore, who is a native of Indiana and entered the service as assistant surgeon in 1853, and served in Florida and with the Utah expedition in 1857. In 1861 he was stationed at the marine hospital in Cincinnati, and in June, 1862, appointed surgeon and assigned to the army of the Potomac as medical director of the central division. In 1863 he was appointed medical director of the army of the Tennessee. He accompanied Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea as medical director, with the rank of colonel. Since the war he has served on the medical examining board of the army, and as director of various departments, until appointed assistant medical purveyor and stationed at the Presidio, San Francisco. The president has appointed a man who entered the army thirty-three years ago, who served in the field with the armies of the Union during four years of severe hardship, and who is justly entitled to promotion by every honorable consideration. Baxter entered the field only to desert it in three months for a medico-political hospital appointment in Washington; he has ever since been angling with every administration to secure the surgeon-generalship through lobby influence, and it is a matter for public congratulation that the president has refused to rob an old surgeon, who has suffered years of severe field service, of his just reward. Surgeon in the field with the armies of the Union was Doctor Moore, physician to the lobby was Doctor Baxter.

THE OREGONIAN does not believe in denominational schools of any description, but it does make a wide distinction between a church which says, "You must send your child to the church school or be denied the rite of communion in the church," and a church which does not slam its doors in the face of a father if he chooses to send his child to the common school.

Four million dollars have been drawn out of the savings banks of San Francisco for investment in stock gambling. That means that the working people of the city have decided to contribute four million dollars more, saved through years out of their hard earnings, to augment the already colossal fortunes of the bonanza mine jobbers.

The labor and socialist party has set up in business for itself in Connecticut. It has nominated a full municipal ticket at New Haven, and will extend its organization to state and national politics. Henry George will lend a hand at New Haven, where the election will be held December 7.

PORTLAND OR PUGET SOUND.

PORTLAND, Or., Dec. 3, 1886.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Mr. J. B. Montgomery, in this morning's OREGONIAN, argues forcibly against bridging the Willamette at Portland, and winds up by stating that "if we sink a vessel or two in our harbor our commerce will go to Puget Sound." Now, I entirely agree with Mr. Montgomery that the sinking of one or more ships in Portland harbor would destroy the commerce of Portland. Why, let me ask, would ships go to Puget Sound? Has Mr. Montgomery forgotten that our splendid Columbia river does not find its way to the sea through Puget sound? I think it is quite time that Portland business men should be reminded that the deep sea commerce of Oregon—indeed of the great Columbia river basin—must always follow the Columbia river to the sea. The mere supply of lumber for the existence of Astoria is no longer worthy of well informed Oregonians. As to the advantages or disadvantages of bridging a river, there are many and widely different opinions on both sides. But without going into these I would merely suggest that a very far sighted man, Portland's dishonored and staunch friend, Mr. Villard, advised and insisted upon bridging our river.

JOHN ADAIR, JR.

Brown's Little Joke.

"Why, drown, how short your hair is!" said Jones one day to his friend Brown, who is slightly bald. "Yes, but it will be long enough before I get another." Some men spend so much for medicines that neither heal nor help them, that new clothes is with these hapless "sights"—few and far between. Internal fevers, weakness of the lungs, shortness of breath and lingering coughs, soon yield to the magic influence of that royal remedy, Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery."

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE

For DECEMBER

CONTAINS

ABRAHAM LINCOLN,

BY HIS CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARIES, JOHN G. NICOLAY AND COL. JOHN HAY.

With portraits, facsimiles of surveys made by Lincoln, views of his early home, etc., and a life size engraving of the cast of the President's right hand, made by the sculptor Volk in 1860. The present installment of the history is devoted to

LINCOLN AS SOLDIER, SURVEYOR AND POLITICIAN.

In all the remarkable characteristics that commanded popularity and won Lincoln the confidence of personal rivals and political foes are brought out in the anecdotal accounts of his business partnerships, reading habits, personal strength, and skill as a wrestler. It also describes the Black Hawk war; Lincoln's first and only defeat in a popular canvass, and his subsequent election to the Legislature, where he met Stephen A. Douglas; "Indian Legislation,"—the land craze of Chicago; the Lincoln Stone protest, and the public feeling on the Slavery question, shown by the murder of Lovejoy.

FRANK R. STOCKTON'S NOVEL,

"The Hundredth Man," began in the November number, will run through the year. In the December chapters the boycott is effectively introduced.

OTHER FEATURES

of the December CENTURY include notable literary and illustrated material concerning Henry Clay; the first article of the striking series on "The Food Question;" the second part of Dr. Martin's "Old Chelsea;" some "Contemporary French Sculptors," with fine illustrations; a unique paper called "A Little Millerite," with curious pictures; "Songs of Christmas;" two war narratives on Gettysburg, by Generals H. J. Hunt and E. M. Law; two short stories, etc.

DURING THE YEAR

Introduction

The best introduction to our Great Salesrooms of Clothing and Furnishings is found in the Two Grand Windows. What more can we say than they say? How better tell you what you need and what we have? The Qualities are there, the Prices are there, the Taste, the Enterprise, the Carefulness, are all represented there. Can you name their equal anywhere? For Clothing, for Furnishings, for all ages, needs, for all pocketbooks, needs, see To-day from 7 A. M. to 8 P. M., Saturday till 10 P. M.
